CISCO'S JOHNETTA RYAN RECOGNIZED WITH LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

The Great Lakes Construction Association (GLCA) recognized CISCO's

Director of Education-toCareers Johnetta Ryan with the prestigious Robert
W. MacGruder
Lifetime
Achievement

Award recently at the Sanfilippo Estate in Barrington Hills, Illinois.

"Johnetta has been guiding students to our union trade apprentice programs and promoting careers in union construction via workshops, career fairs and presentations in Illinois for almost 20 years," Executive Director Dan Allen said in his introductory remarks.

Allen said that Johnetta exemplifies the spirit of leadership which Bob MacGruder demonstrated for the Lake County Contractor's Association (GLCA predecessor) for 23 years.

"What makes Johnetta so effective is she knows first hand the hard work and commitment it takes to be successful in this industry, and she doesn't sugar coat it," Allen added.

In accepting the award, Johnetta thanked the GLCA, her CISCO co-workers and CISCO Board members, and the apprenticeship coordinators who attended the event.

"I love my job," she added. "The Board has been supportive in backing me and giving me the tools I have needed to do my job."

In her closing remarks, Johnetta mentioned her father, who advised her in 1970, when she started at Illinois Bell to 'find your union steward during your first break, and sign up for the union. "That, she said, was the best advice he ever gave me."

The award is named in honor of Robert W. MacGruder, who was Executive Vice President of the Lake County Contractor's Association (GLCA predecessor) from 1973-1996 before his death in March of 2017.

OBAMA FOUNDATION SUMMIT DRAWS GLOBAL AUDIENCE

CISCO had a seat at the table during the recent Obama Foundation Summit as Executive Director Dan Allen was one of the speakers during Monday's many breakout sessions.

The session, "The Obama
Presidential Center: How We Build
Is Just As Important," featured Mike
Strautmanis, Chief Engagement
Officer, Obama Foundation; Charise
Williams, Emerald South Economic Development Collaborative and
Chicago Federation of Labor; Toni
Griffin, Harvard Urban Planning, and Dan Allen.

With a steady trend of urban renewal in America over the last few decades, this session answered the questions: 1) How do we reinvest in our cities without displacing or disenfranchising current residents?
2) How do we manage growth so it benefits every resident?

Dan Allen describes to the session attendees how CISCO has worked with many Chicagoland organizations in order to recruit and attract a future group of diverse adults into the building trades, as well as eliminate barriers that would otherwise prevent this diverse group from successful acceptance and completion of an apprenticeship program.

CISCO ON THE MOVE

RCEC CELEBRATES THE SEASON

The successful partnership of the Residential Construction Employers Council (RCEC), the Residential Home Builders Alliance (RHBA) and School District 211, was on full display during the recent RCEC Holiday Dinner event.

Several organizations and trades were on hand to join RCEC and RHBA as they encourage the next generation of tradespeople who are enrolled in the District 211 building program by donating funds, work clothes and other work accessories.

Most notable among the donations were 100 Carhartt jackets provided by RCEC officers, and $2500 contributed by the Chicago Regional Council of Carpenters (see above photo).

NATIONAL APPRENTICESHIP WEEK DRAWS HUNDREDS TO OPEN HOUSES

Three different trades held Open Houses last week, and drew hundreds to their training facilities:

- 1) The Chicago Regional Council of Carpenters (CRCC) hosted two separate days on November 14 & 15, featuring facility tours and presentations about the CRCC's successful registered apprenticeship program.
- 2) Plumbers Local 130 invited the public to learn how plumbers protect the health of the nation, with tours of the Joint Apprenticeship Committee's new Training Center in Chicago.

And 3) the Painters District Council No. 30 also hosted an Apprenticeship Open House at their Training Center in Aurora.
